How to add the digital map to your phone

To help you visualise where each recommendation is in relation to the others, and to help you navigate when you're on the ground in London, I've made a Digital Map to complement this guide.

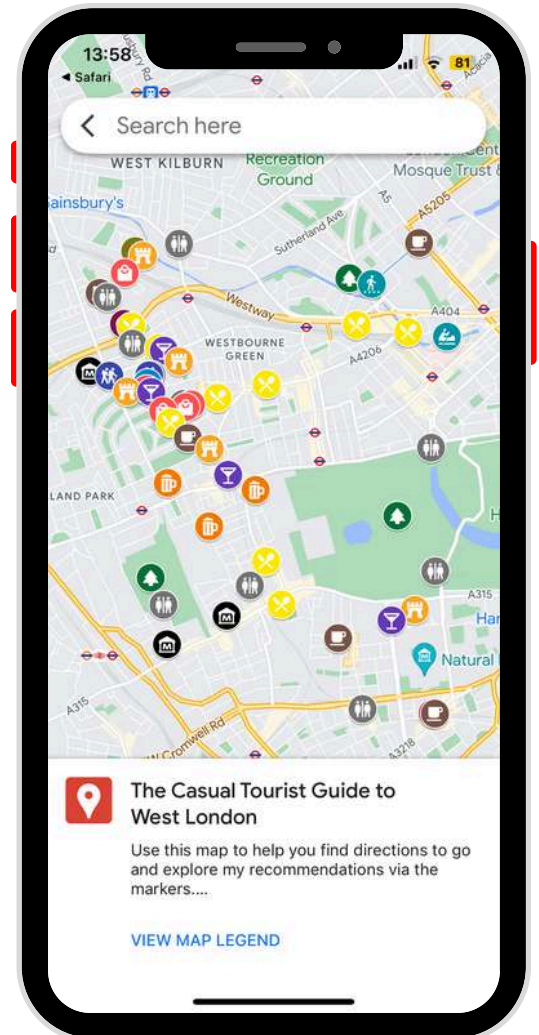

ACCESS THE DIGITAL MAP

To access the map, click the button above or scan the QR code. If you have the Google Maps app, once you've clicked and visited the map once, it will then be automatically saved to your Google Maps app. To find it in the app, click on the "Saved" button at the bottom of the app. Then click "Maps" in the menu and you'll see the Digital Map in this list. Click it to view. You can also use the "directions" function to get walking and public transport directions.

The map works in any internet browser even if you don't have the Google Maps app.

If you need help with this, just email us at hello@loveandlondon.com and we'll be happy to assist you.

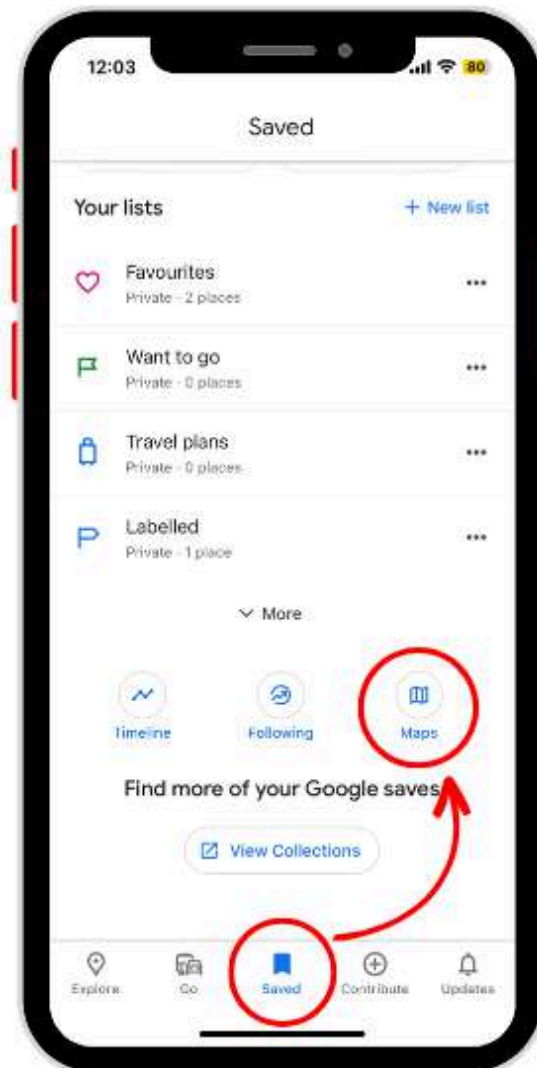

How to find the digital map on the Google Maps app

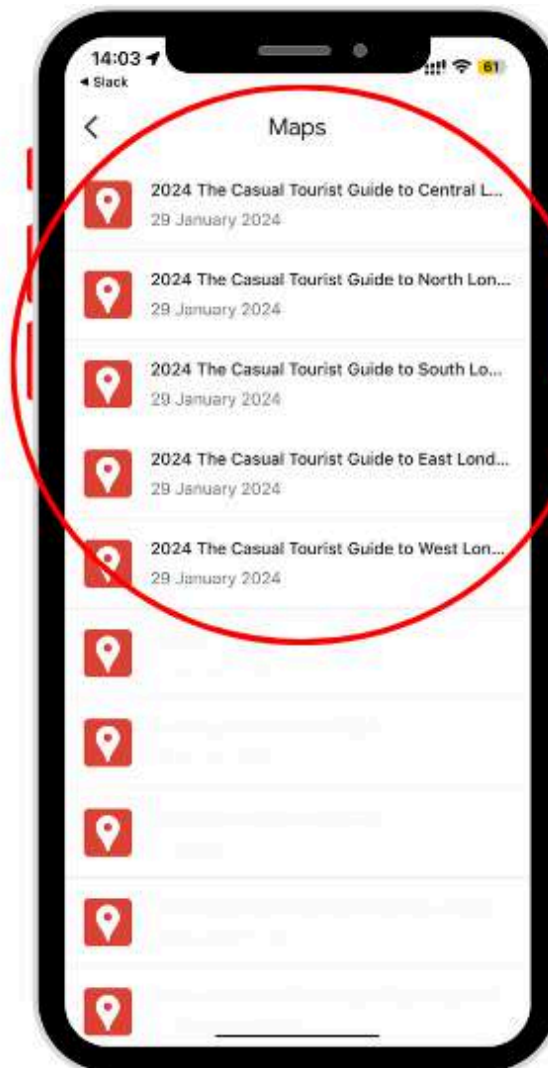

1. Once you've clicked and visited the map the first time, it will then be added to your Google Maps app.
2. Open the Google Maps app, and click on "Saved" in the bottom middle.
3. Click "Maps" in the menu.
4. You'll see the Digital Map in this list. Click it to view.
5. There you go! Click "View Map Legend" to control which category of pins is shown (this feature is only available on iOS systems and desktop).

See the screenshots on the next page.

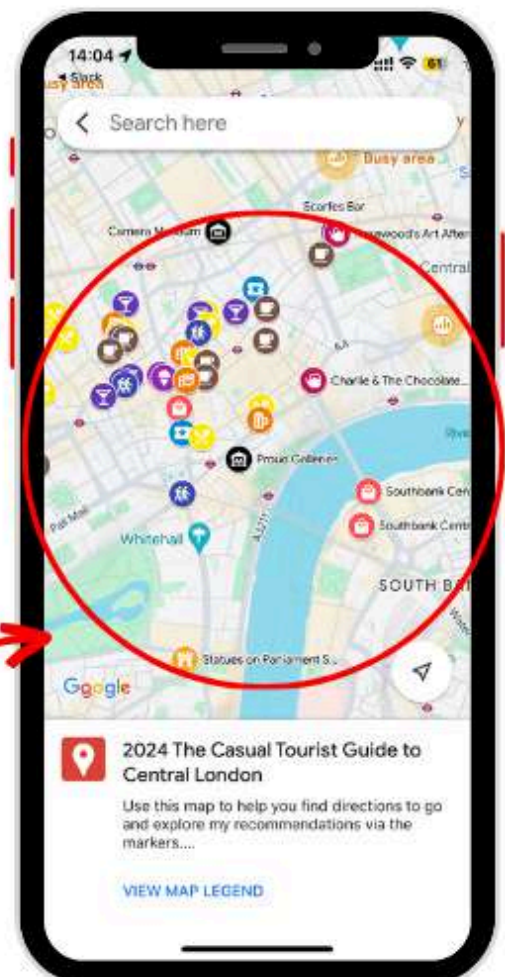

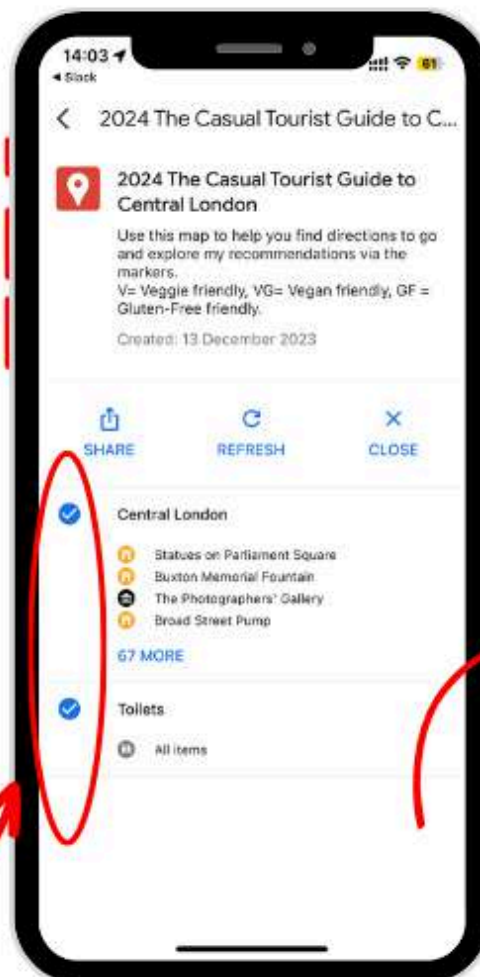

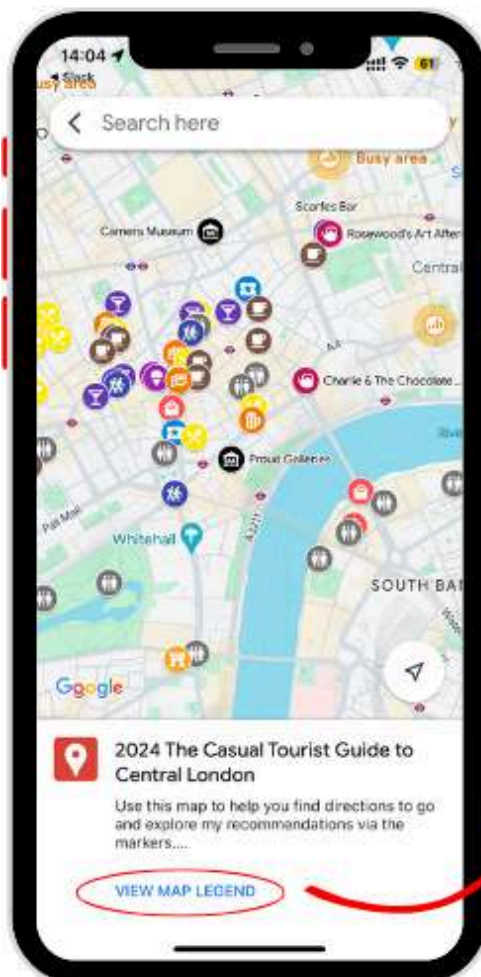

CASUAL TOURIST GUIDE TO WEST LONDON

Step 2 and 3

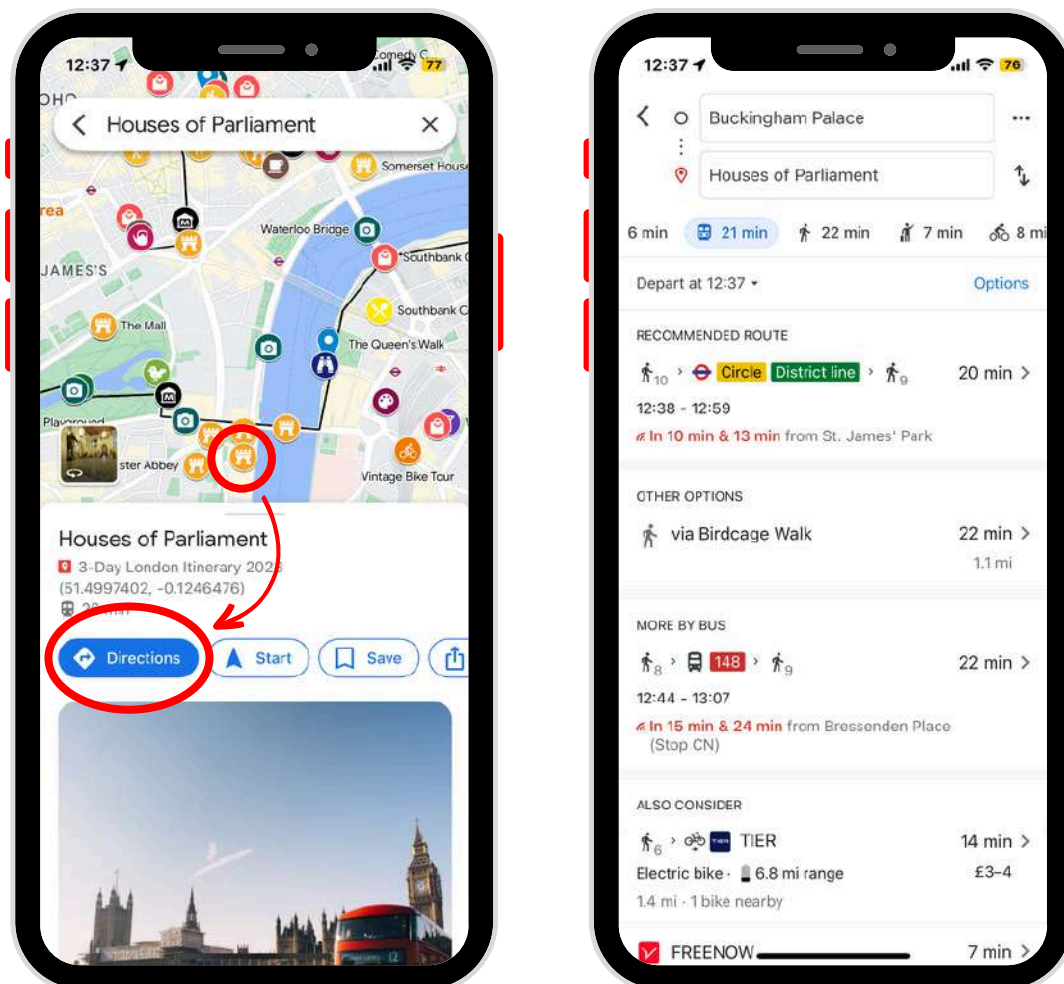

Step 4

Step 5: this feature is only available on iOS devices and desktop

How to get directions to a pin on the map

Know where you want to go next? Just click on its pin, then click “directions” to see all of your transport options, including walking directions.

Troubleshooting

If you're struggling to get your map working, here are common solutions:

1. Is your Google Maps app updated to the latest version?
2. Are you logged into the same Google Maps account across your devices? If your map is showing up on one of your devices but not the others, it's usually because you're using different accounts.
3. Can you try accessing your Digital Map on a desktop first, while logged into your Google account?

And finally, if you're still having problems, just email us at hello@loveandlondon.com and we'll be happy to help you out.

Welcome to The Casual Tourist Guide to West London!

West London is known for being a leafy, posh part of the city. Walk down almost any street and you'll see rows of stunning Victorian houses as far as the eye can see. Londoners here also appreciate having lots of beautiful green spaces to enjoy, no matter the weather... they'll go for a walk through Kensington Gardens even when it's raining!

And with all of this beauty and elegance, you'll probably be able to guess that west London is home to some of the most expensive areas to live. Property prices here are INSANE, which is why you might run into a celebrity or two while you're out and about.

Amazing high-end restaurants, cute cafes serving top-notch coffee and treats, and unique shops worth a browse, many of which you'll see recommended in this guide, also characterise west London. I've included the ones I LOVE to recommend to friends and family, and I think you'll enjoy them too.

This guide covers Notting Hill, Kensington and Paddington, but you might notice that the majority of the recommendations are around the area you'll know so well due to a certain Julia Roberts film. That's because of all of west London, in my opinion, it has the best vibe and the best spots.

Right... so go on, get to reading, and enjoy your time in London. Don't forget to print your checklist so you can keep track of which recommendations you've tried, and which ones you're saving for your next visit.

Area guide:

Kensington and South Kensington

Kensington and South Kensington are beautiful, upscale areas in London known for their stunning Victorian architecture, world-renowned museums and universities, and high-end shopping. They're home to several major museums (as you'll see) and the Royal Albert Hall. Thanks to Kensington Gardens and Kensington Palace, there's quite a royal vibe around here. The food scene isn't quite up to stack though - it can be pricey and boring, but don't worry, I'll steer you in the right direction.

Little Venice

Little Venice is a picturesque and charming area near Paddington, and not far from Notting Hill. It's known for its tranquil canals, colourful narrowboats, and charming waterside cafes and pubs. If you're looking for a peaceful escape from the hustle and bustle of the city, Little Venice is the perfect spot. Here you can take a stroll along the canal, enjoy a meal or a drink with a view of the water, or even take a boat ride.

Paddington

Paddington is home to beautiful Georgian architecture and is a popular spot because of its handy transport links, which can get you all around the rest of London. Here you'll find some spots I love including the Paddington Bear statue and a cute boat cafe in the buzzy Paddington Basin. I love how Paddington is connected to popular areas like Notting Hill and Camden via canal (and I'll tell you how you can drive your own boat along it!).

About the recommendations...

You'll see that I've separated the recommendations in this guide into their respective categories: food and markets, shopping, etc. Then, in each category, I have grouped together the ones that are in the same area, to help make it a bit easier to understand where they are in relation to each other.

Don't forget: I've also provided you with a printable checklist to help you organise your visit, and you've got the Digital Map that will show you distances and directions as well. Not all of the areas in this guide are within walking distance, so with all of these tools you can plan accordingly.

If you have any questions or problems, feel free to shoot us an email at hello@loveandlondon.com and we'll be happy to help.

About this guide

This guide is a PDF that's NOT meant to be printed, in order to save ink and paper, plus it has links on almost every page. So instead, just save it to your devices so you can always reference it.

We made the one-page checklist to be easily printable, so feel free to do that - or you can save it to your phone and add checkmarks digitally.

You'll see some symbols under each recommendation - here's what they mean:

HOURS

VEGGIE FRIENDLY

VEGAN FRIENDLY

LOCATION (CLICKABLE)

GLUTEN-FREE FRIENDLY

And here's the cost guide:

£ - up to £20 (per person)

££ - £21 up to £40

£££ - £41 up to £70

££££ - £70 +

Finally, the less fun part... please do not share this guide with anyone beyond those you're travelling with. It's meant to be used only by those who have (kindly) paid for it, and any distribution beyond that is against the law.

OK, now go have fun!

SIGHTS AND POINTS OF INTEREST

MUSEUM OF BRANDS

The Museum of Brands is a super interesting way to learn about British history and pop culture throughout the centuries. This little museum (a registered charity) has a "time tunnel" where you walk through a chronological journey of 200 years of consumer culture, with over 12,000 original items on display. You get to see how things like wars, technology, and cultural progression influenced fashion, marketing tactics, trends, and much more.

When you're done learning, stop into the museum's cafe for a tea in their beautiful green garden patio.

TRELICK TOWER

Trellick Tower is a Grade II listed (partially historically preserved) tower block in Kensal Green, but as one of the tallest buildings in the area, you can clearly see it from nearby places like Notting Hill. As a local landmark, it's got quite an interesting story. Built and opened in 1972, it was commissioned by the Greater London Council and designed in the Brutalist style, which was quite the thing back then. It was planned to replace outdated social housing, and was designed with a few space-saving features and even a separate access tower with its own plant room.

But high rise buildings and this style of architecture were no longer so on-trend once the tower was finished, and it, unfortunately, became a hotspot for various types of crime and drug abuse. But thankfully, things improved in the 1980s when a residents' association was introduced, which set up better security measures, and by the 90s the tower was back in favour with local Londoners as a place to live. It's still predominately social housing, even in a time when demand for private flats is so high.

You might recognise Trellick Tower from movies and TV shows like For Queen and Country and Black Mirror: Bandersnatch.

GEORGE ORWELL BLUE PLAQUE

Along this row of colourful houses sits number 22, a notable one because it was the first London home of George Orwell, who lived here with Mrs Craig in the winter of 1927 after resigning as Assistant Superintendent of the Indian Imperial Police in Burma. George wasn't born in London but he lived the majority of his life in the city. See if you can spot the blue plaque noting this on the front facade of the house.

Free | Notting Hill

XL RECORDINGS

XL Recordings is a tiny British indie record label founded back in 1989. Although it only releases a few albums a year, they've worked with some MAJOR names, like Adele, Azealia Banks, Dizzee Rascal, M.I.A., and The White Stripes, to name just a very few (seriously, there are a ton more names I couldn't fit here). It was only in 2008 that they started properly recording albums here however, as that's when co-owner Richard Russell turned the rear garage of the label's Notting Hill headquarters into a small, in-house recording and mixing studio called XL Studio.

While you can't go into the studio, head down Codrington Mews to see the building's black-and-white striped exterior mural, created by Stanley Donwood. It was inspired by the artwork on Thom York's "The Eraser" album, and features a few major London landmarks like The Gherkin and the Tower of London.

LEIGHTON HOUSE MUSEUM

The Leighton House Museum is both an art museum and a chance to appreciate unspoiled historic London architecture and design. The museum is in the home of the painter Frederic Leighton, who was the first Baron of Leighton from 1830–1896. Leighton commissioned architect and designer George Aitchison to build him a home and studio combination, and asked for the incorporation of tiles and other elements from the Near East. The house was completed in 1895 and is now Grade II listed, which means it's protected from major changes and demolition.

Since 1929, the museum has been open to the public to admire not only the home, but also Leighton's impressive permanent art collection. His pieces are on display across the house, with works by the likes of John Everett Millais, Edward Burne-Jones and George Frederic Watts, and there are 81 oil paintings by Leighton himself.

Adults tickets are £14,, Kids (6-18) £5 and under 6 years are free.

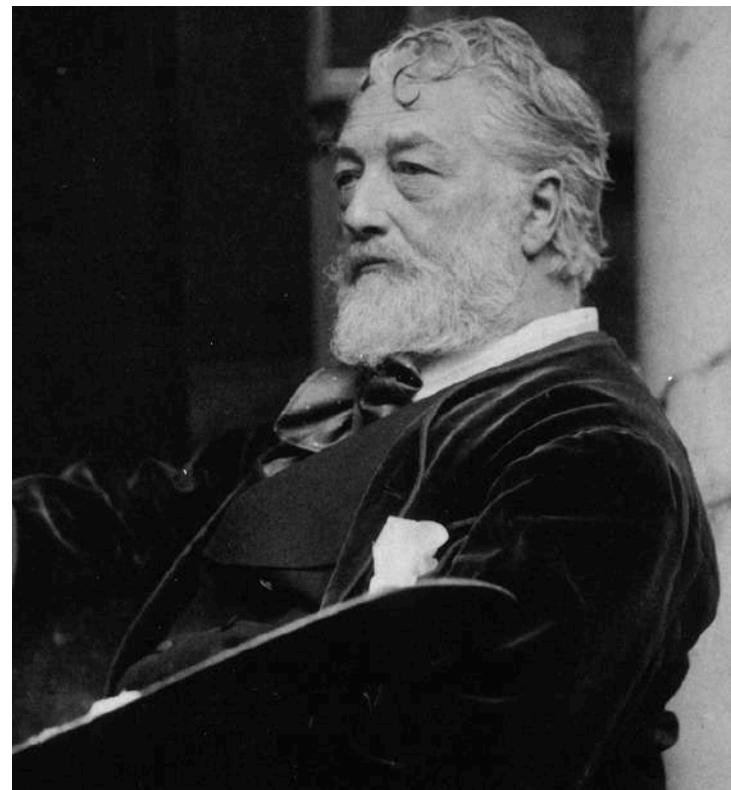

Wed - Mon 10am - 5:30pm (last admission at 4:30pm)

SAMBOURNE HOUSE

Quirky Sambourne House was the family home of famous illustrator and photographer Linley Sambourne. He and his wife Marion moved into the home in 1874 and with their limited funds, decorated in what was considered a pretty “maximalist” fashion for the time. The house is now a museum, and visitors could honestly spend hours exploring the many levels of this Victorian home, looking at William Morris wallpapers, plentiful displays of drawings and photographs, and observing its many historical knickknacks. If you visit Sambourne House, you can buy a combined ticket that gets you entrance to both Leighton House Museum and Sambourne House.

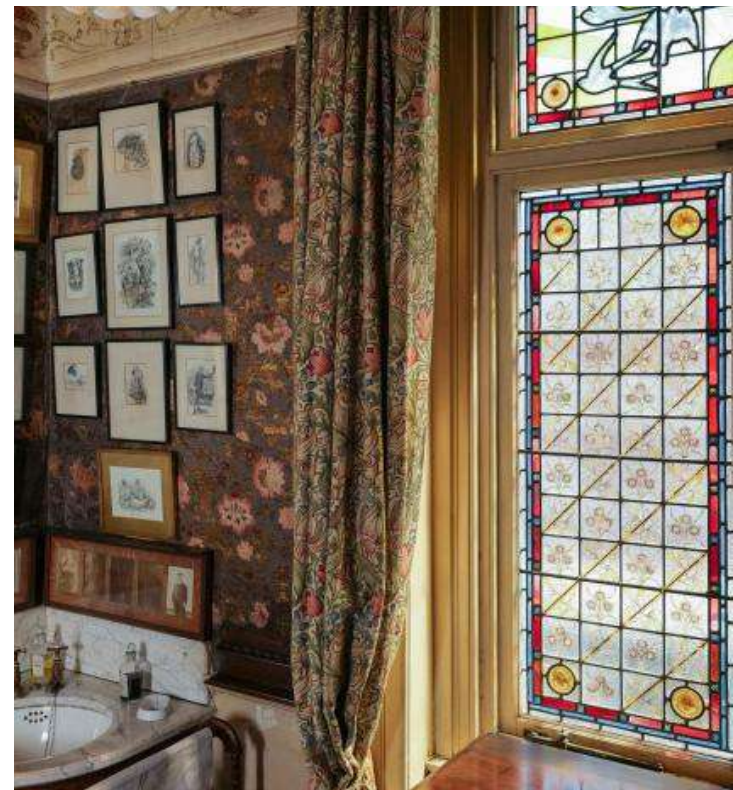

Adults tickets are £12, Kids (6-18) £5 and under 6 years are free.

HOLLAND PARK AND KYOTO GARDEN

Holland Park is one of the most beautiful parks in west London, spread across 54 acres of what used to be Cope Castle, a large Jacobean mansion hidden in the woods of the city, built back in the early 17th century by Sir Walter Cope.

The castle was then renamed Holland House after the Earl of Holland's wife Lady Rich inherited it, but sadly the house was badly damaged during World War II. However, one wing was saved and now operates as a hostel, and a section of the front terrace was saved, which is now used for the park's summertime open-air theatre shows and concerts.

Holland Park is smaller than many of London's more popular parks, making it a super manageable place to walk around and escape the hustle and bustle of the city. It's especially well-loved by locals in the summertime, who will take picnics, meet friends, and exercise here.

When you visit, make sure you pop over to Kyoto Garden, which was created to celebrate the Japan Festival in London in 1992. Here you'll find a zen Japanese garden, complete with waterfalls, koi fish and even peacocks!

KENSINGTON GARDENS

Kensington Gardens is one of London's eight Royal Parks, which are lands in London that were originally used for recreation (mostly hunting) by the royal family. They're now 5,000 acres of public space that are free to enjoy. Local Londoners love to come here no matter what the weather to cycle, walk or run around the park, admiring the many beautiful aspects of it, like the Princess Diana Memorial Playground, the Albert Memorial (commemorating Prince Albert, Queen Victoria's husband) and the Italian Gardens.

Art lovers can also get their fix at the Serpentine Galleries, or you can tour parts of the historic and beautiful Kensington Palace, still a royal residence.

With 265 acres of green space, there's quite a bit to see here, with the chance to escape the craziness of the city and instead feel like you're in the English countryside.

ROYAL ALBERT HALL

The incredible Royal Albert Hall is a concert hall that's one of the most iconic buildings in London. It's held in trust for the nation and managed by a registered charity, but it hosts some of the most incredible events in the world, with seating for 5,272 people. It was opened by Queen Victoria in 1871, and is named after her husband, Prince Albert, who had died a few years earlier. The hall hosts around 400 shows annually in its main auditorium, including concerts, film premieres, ballets, operas and more.

There are a few ways you can visit the legendary Royal Albert Hall. First is to, of course, attend a show. On the hall's website is a list of the shows with public tickets available, so if something strikes your fancy then grab a ticket. You can also tour the hall, with the option to do a classic tour, running most days, or a behind the scenes tour, which happens a few times a year. Both of these can be booked via the hall's site. (Adults £20, kids £12).

You can also book a music-themed afternoon tea in the hall's Coda restaurant, where you'll enjoy "classic finger sandwiches, freshly baked scones and a whimsical mix of musically-inspired cakes as a nod to the legendary performances that take place on our stage."

CLIFTON NURSERIES

Tucked away off a quiet road in Little Venice, Clifton Nurseries made its home here all the way back in 1851. Go through the main entrance, down a narrow alleyway and you'll be in for a surprise: you'd never expect to find an extensive garden centre, shop and cafe smack dab in the middle of a busy part of the city. Even if you aren't into plants and gardening, it's still quite a special spot.

If you're visiting London, I appreciate it's not realistic to bring a plant back home, but they have a fantastic selection of home decor, gardening bits and bobs, and other potential gifts for anyone in your life that is greenery-inclined. And while you're there, stop into the cafe for tea and a yummy piece of cake.

ACTIVITIES

SEE A FILM AT ELECTRIC CINEMA PORTOBELLO

The Electric Cinema is not only one of the most iconic and beautiful buildings in Notting Hill, it also has a pretty significant history, as it's one of the oldest working film theatres in Britain now, opening way back in 1910. It was also one of the first buildings in the UK to be designed specifically for motion pictures to be shown to the public. Interestingly, the name comes from the fact that it was one of the first buildings in the area to be supplied with electricity! The Electric Cinema became the first Black-owned cinema in the UK back in 1993; it remained Black-owned until 2000, and it's now under the Soho House hospitality group (if you're a member, you get discounted tickets).

Even with all of this history, a ticket to Electric Cinema means watching a film in pure luxury. Your seating options include armchairs, beds for two, and sofas for two, and the fully-licensed bar serves a selection of cocktails, wine, beer and champagne, plus substantial cinema snacks.

If you find yourself with a rainy and cold day in London (or maybe it's hot as balls and you want to be in a cool, dark place) get yourself to Electric Cinema. If you've got kids in tow, check out the special children's screenings, and do note that they are able to accommodate for hearing and visual impairments as well as wheelchair users.

Adult tickets from £20.

MAKE YOUR OWN GRAFFITI AT GRAFFIK GALLERY

Graffik Gallery is known as one of the top art galleries for street-style art in London, and their selection is well worth a browse. Their pieces are super cool and urban, and on display you can view works by Banksy, Dotmaster, Stik, Alec Monopoly, Bambi, TRUST.iCON, and more. But beyond just seeing these (very cool) pieces, you can also get involved and make your own street art with the gallery's graffiti class.

In a relaxed and friendly environment, you'll get the chance to spray your own piece on an A4-sized canvas to take home with you. Because of the small size, you'll do stencil work on your canvas, but then you're given the chance to run wild and spray whatever you want on the gallery's garden walls. The classes are run by recognised graffiti writers, and they're great for ages 8 and up, and all levels of spray painting skills. Send them a DM on Instagram to book in advance.

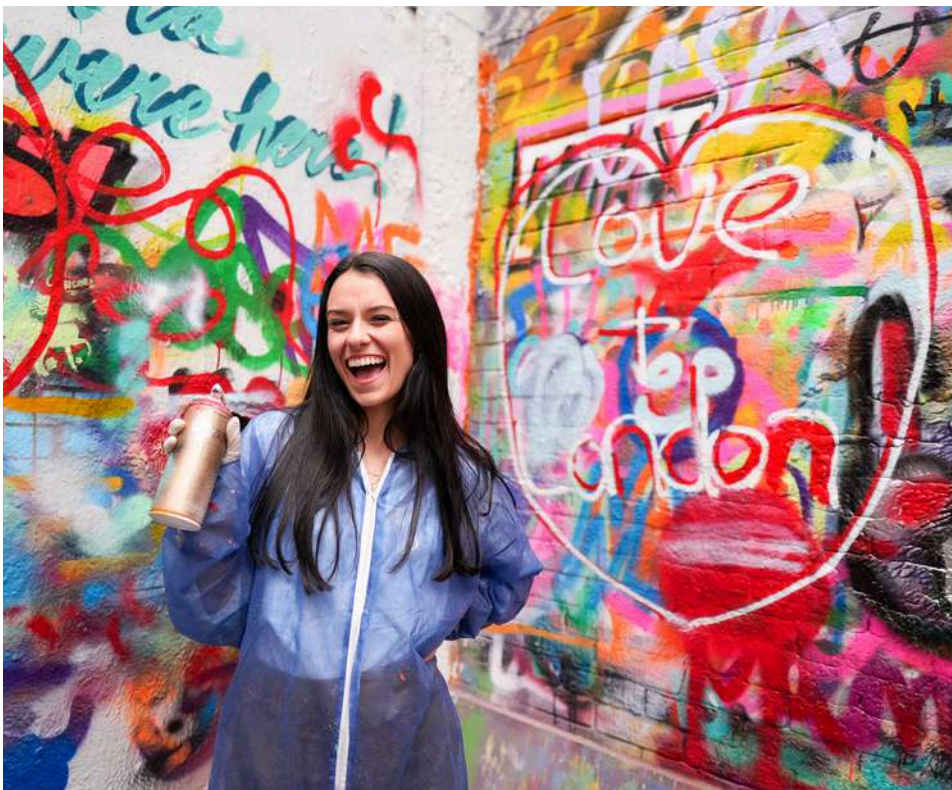

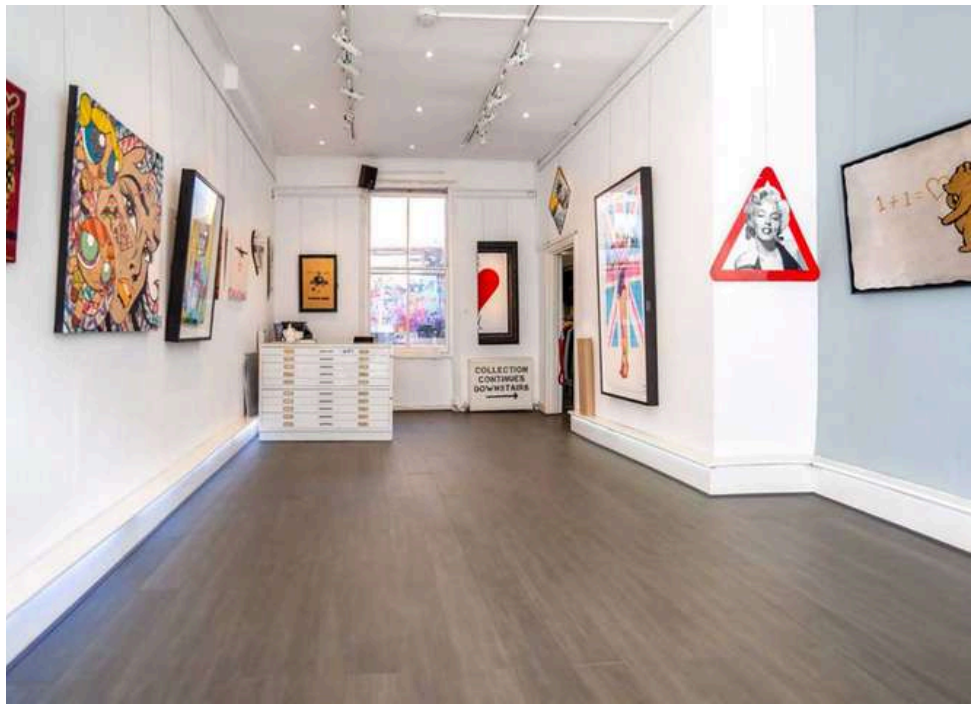

Tue, Wed & Fri – Sun 11am – 6pm

HAVE A SCIENCE AFTERNOON TEA AT THE AMPERSAND

Afternoon tea at the luxurious Ampersand Hotel in South Kensington isn't just any ordinary tea; it's science-themed, inspired by the nearby Science Museum. Some of the treats, like the red currant & lychee jelly in a petri dish, are interactive - just like the experience at the museum - making this an extra unique experience for both kids and adults (there's a separate kids tea available, still science-themed). I'm especially a fan of the chocolate spacemen! As with any afternoon tea, you also get your choice of tea, coffee, and the option to add on champagne.

The Science Afternoon Tea won Best Themed Afternoon Tea at the Afternoon Tea Awards 2018. Definitely book ahead on the weekends, but there's usually last-minute availability during the week.

They accommodate for dietary requirements; just let them know in advance.

Mon - Fri 12pm - 7pm, Sat - Sun 11am - 7:30pm

WALK ALONG REGENT'S CANAL

Regent's Canal runs through parts of north and east London, and was originally built in 1820 with the hopes of connecting Grand Junction Canal's Paddington Arm to Limehouse, where a new dock was to be built. When it was completed, however, rail transport had recently become more popular and at one point the cut canal was almost turned into a railway. But thankfully it stayed as a waterway and was a vital part of southern England's transport system for many decades.

These days, the canal is home to thousands of houseboats and scenic walking paths that are enjoyed by both Londoners and tourists.

TAKE A GOBOAT DOWN THE CANAL

OK, so I mentioned walking along Regent's Canal a few pages ago, but how would you like to chug down the canal on a boat instead? Well, GoBoat gives you the chance to do just that. Head to the GoBoat HQ in Paddington where you'll pick up your own boat. You're the captain; just choose your route and get on your way, no experience necessary. Imagine the views of the canal FROM the canal!

GoBoats can hold up to eight people, and children are allowed as passengers (they'll wear life jackets if they're under eight) as well as dogs. You can even bring your own food and drink on board to enjoy while you sail past the canal boats and other points of interest like Regent's Park and Camden Lock. This is a GREAT way to see London when you have dry, warm-ish weather!

Definitely book your boat at least a day or two in advance during the week or earlier on the weekends, as they are quite popular in the summer!

CAFES AND SWEET TREATS

FARM GIRL

Farm Girl, just off Portobello Road in Notting Hill or right near the V&A in South Kensington, is an Instagram dream. Its colourful interiors are both farmhouse and California coastal inspired, leaving its guests feeling relaxed while being surrounded by colourful walls and stunning tilework. This is one of my favourite spots for a coffee, whether it be just a typical cappuccino or one of their colourful lattes made with turmeric or matcha. Pair yours with a fresh cake or pastry, or one of Farm Girl's popular brunch-style dishes, many of which are vegan and/or gluten-free.

They don't take any bookings so the queue does get quite long on the weekends... try to visit during the week if you can. Enjoy all of the dog-spotting - there are always so many cute floofs here!

LIBBY'S

Libby's, a sweet, pink gluten-free bakery, is one for my gluten-free people. I know it's hard to find good GF pastries and sweets, so I had to add this to this Casual Tourist Guide for you to make a stop if you can't do gluten. They also make coffee here, as well as a few bits that are vegan.

BLUEBELLES OF PORTOBELLO

This blue-fronted, cosy little cafe at the top of Portobello Road feels like you're in someone's kitchen/living room combo, with exposed brick walls, a rustic wooden bar you can sit at, and chilled vibes from the staff and local pup customers. Stop here for a quick coffee made with locally-loved Caravan beans, pick up a fresh-baked pastry (I always go for the lemon and blueberry cake) or if you want to stay a bit longer, choose something from their brunch menu, which offers breakfast baps (sandwiches), egg pots, burgers and more. It gets busy on the weekends here, so go early to ensure you get a seat without a long wait.

HJEM KENSINGTON

Step into HJEM Kensington (Hjem is the Danish word for home) and you're stepping into a Nordic dream. Housed in a former florist's boutique, this cafe quickly became a Kensington favourite when it first opened, and now there are sometimes queues out the door of eager locals waiting to enter.

Order a coffee here and it will be brewed with beans from London roasteries like Kiss the Hippo, and honestly, it's quite difficult to pick from the many beautiful sweet treats, breads and pastries on display. If you're after something a bit heartier, choose from their menu of Danish-influenced breakfast and brunch dishes like avocado on rye bread or croissants stuffed with cheese.

THE DRAWING ROOMS AT THE AMPERSAND HOTEL

After a few hours spent walking around the museums in South Kensington, I love popping into The Drawing Rooms at The Ampersand Hotel (part of the Small Luxury Hotels of the World collection) for a coffee and pastry in a beautiful, cosy setting. Think: part tea salon, part English drawing room. It's a calm, beautiful alternative to the bustling chain cafes just outside, with top-notch service to boot.

Also served in The Drawing Room is the Science Afternoon Tea, recommended in the Activities section.

CAFE LAVILLE

Cafe Laville is one of the most unique cafes in London because it's perched perfectly above Regent's Canal in Little Venice. In fact, if you take one of the GoBoats recommended in the Activities section, you can captain your boat right UNDER it. Sip your coffee and enjoy your breakfast while you look over the canal and all of the houseboats lined up along it... I can't think of a better way to start your day in London.

Cafe Laville is also an Italian restaurant serving lunch and dinner, but I prefer just doing coffee and a light breakfast here.

SHOPPING

GOLBORNE ROAD

When people think "antiques" in London, they mostly think of Portobello Road Market which, in my opinion, is... fine. But it's not great, plus the market gets absolutely heaving with people on the weekends.

If you're a true lover of antiques I would instead recommend walking about ten minutes north along Portobello Road to Golborne Road. Here you'll find a mix of quirky and high-end antiques shops (think: pieces for thousands of pounds), plus on the weekends some sellers set up tents and sell antique furniture and home decor.

Mixed in with the antiques are coffee shops, indie fashion boutiques, and a heavy concentration of Portuguese cafes. Tourists rarely venture up this way so it's a fab alternative when touristy Portobello Road is just too much to bear.

£££ - ££££ | Notting Hill

PORTOBELLO ROAD GREEN MARKET

If you loooooove a good vintage find like I do, make a beeline for Portobello Green Market. Open Friday to Sunday, it's packed with amazing retro pieces like leather jackets, vintage designer sunglasses, and one-off treasures you probably will never find anywhere else. I'd 100% go early for the best picks, and don't be shy about haggling, it's all part of the fun. There's also plenty of street food nearby if you tire from hours of sifting through the hundreds of racks.

WESTBOURNE GROVE

There's a little bit of everything on this popular west London street, from mid-high end trendy fashion finds to unique homewares, plus some of the prettiest cafes. A local favourite? Daylesford Organic that's packed with farm-fresh goodies, pastries and a cosy place to sit if you need some respite from shopping.

OXFAM WESTBOURNE GROVE

Here in the UK a lot of secondhand shopping happens at "charity shops". These shops take donations of clothing and accessories, sell them in their shops and put the money towards the charity. Notting Hill is a GREAT area to browse charity shops as they tend to send their best stuff there. Don't expect rock-bottom prices but you'll see some amazing pieces and plenty of designer items.

My favourite charity shop in Notting Hill is this one, the Oxfam on Westbourne Grove, and it's even been nominated as one of the 50 Best Boutiques in London by the Evening Standard. They sell both women's and men's clothing, plus shoes and accessories. I've found my absolute favourite pair of black suede knee-high L.K. Bennett boots here, and I've found so many beautiful gems in this charity shop, which I wear all the time!

 Mon - Sat 10am - 6pm, Sun 12pm - 4pm

SÉZANE

Sézane is my favourite non-secondhand shop in London. It was founded in 2013 by Morgane Sezalory, and is the epitome of "French girl style", selling chic, contemporary but effortless pieces.

Sézane was recently awarded a B-Corp certification, which means that it has passed strict standards that show that they take care of the planet and their workers. I love to see it!

The shop is primarily women's clothing, however they've also got a men's line which is in store now too.

FARA NOTTING HILL

Another fantastic charity shop that curates women's and men's designer pieces as well as lots of nice things from high street brands (like the usual fast fashion shops). They also organise the store very well, making it an easy shopping experience. It's here that I've picked up multiple cashmere jumpers (sweaters) and other gems that I wear all of the time. I like to stop in every time I'm in the area (even if I was only there the day before), so I can see if anything new has been added to the racks! They've recently expanded their books and homewares section so have a peek in the back to see if anything jumps out at you.

DAUNT BOOKS

Filled with old-world charm and a cosy vibe that makes you want to stay and browse all afternoon, Daunt Books has a beautiful collection of fiction, history, and art novels, including a pretty extensive travel section. If you're in the area, definitely swing by – even just for a moment of peace away from the bustling city. Plus, the little bookshop café is a perfect spot to grab a coffee and get lost in a novel for a hot minute.

DE NADAS EMPANADAS

Notting Hill is known for mostly having mid-range to luxurious food options, but if you just want something tasty and affordable while you're in the area, De Nadas is the perfect stop. They make incredible handmade Argentinian empanadas with 15 different types of cool fillings like blue cheese and pear, spiced lamb, plus squash and kale. There's something for everyone, including heaps of veggie and vegan options. You can eat in or takeaway, it's up to you.

Sun - Thu 10am - 6pm, Fri - Sat 9am - 8pm

RIA'S

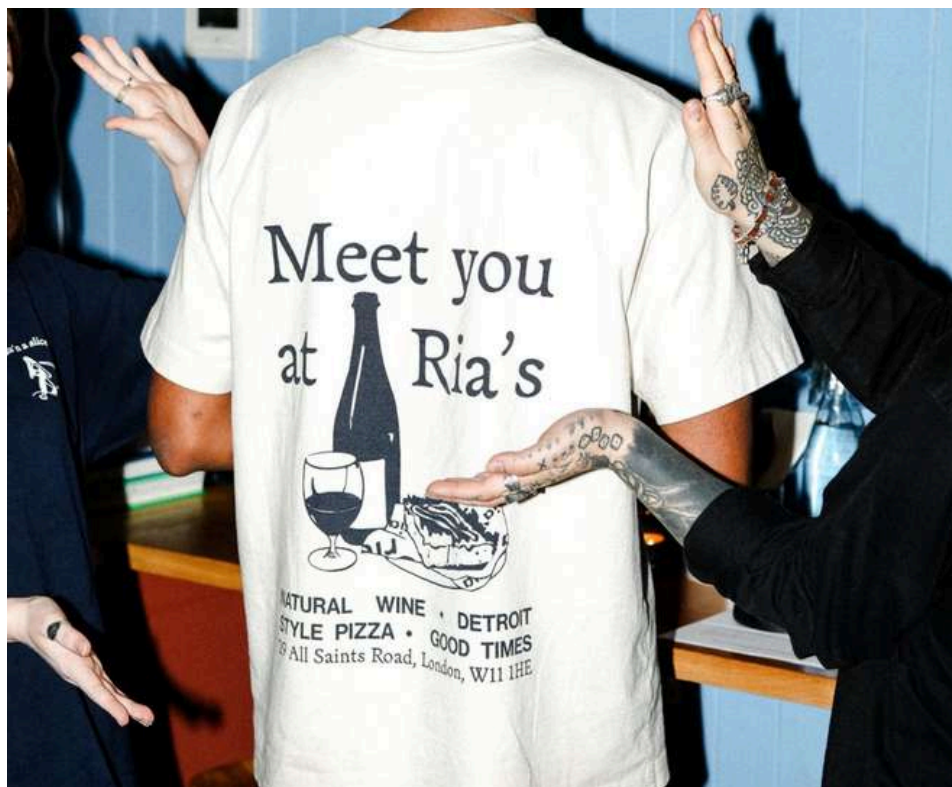

If you're a pizza lover, you're going to LOVE Ria's. This cosy, locally-loved spot serves up Detroit-style pizza (aka the perfect thick, square slice) alongside a great selection of natural wines. It's also got a super cosy, candle-lit interior which really adds to the vibes. Oh, and whatever you do, make sure you get a side of their hot honey. It's the best thing to drizzle over your deep-dish.

 Mon - Sat 12pm - 11pm, Sun 12pm - 10pm

CONSCIENCE KITCHEN

Tucked along All Saints Road, Conscious Kitchen is a real hidden gem serving up seriously tasty Egyptian-inspired breakfasts, brunches and lunches. The vibe's super relaxed and friendly, and the staff make you feel at home. The menu is full of dishes like shakshuka, kofta and the most amazing Egyptian breakfast made from fava beans (trust me, it's a must-order).

 Wed - Thu 8:30am - 5:30pm, Fri 8:30am - 6pm, Sat - Sun 9:30am - 6pm

TONKOTSU

If you're after something cheap and cheerful (but super yummy), Tonkotsu in Notting Hill is a solid shout. Just a short stroll from the Portobello Road, this relaxed ramen spot serves up steaming Japanese favourites like ramen, katsu and more. Plus, everything's made from scratch, from the noodles to the broth! No need for a reservation, just walk in. Try ask for the bar seating, so you can see the chefs at work. BTW, it's great for families as they have a bunch of kid-friendly options.

POPPIES

Poppies is a classic fish and chipper in London and its Portobello Road location is one of my faves. Located right in the heart of Notting Hill, it's got all the charm and nostalgia of the original spots, with fun retro details that nod to the building's past (it used to be a bank and a butcher's shop). The fish and chips are also incredibly authentic, served with mushy peas and all. It's honestly a perfect pitstop while exploring Portobello Market. You can choose to get takeaway OR dine in here... I'd recommend trying to get a table inside. Oh, and a little treat for you: I've managed to get you a 20% discount, just show this discount here to your server or at the register before you pay.

ZEPHYR

This modern Greek spot in Notting Hill is perfect for a more upscale lunch or dinner. Think next-level sharing plates with fresh, bold flavours. My favourites are the baked butter beans with feta and Kalamata olives, and the aubergine with citrus yoghurt, dukkha and parsley. If you're into cocktails, definitely try the NEGROILY too, which is a classic Negroni made with olive oil. It's SO good. Just make sure to book ahead because this place fills up pretty quickly.

GOLD

Gold Portobello is located smack-dab in the middle of Portobello Road. It's somewhat unassuming on the outside, but once you're seated, you'll see just how gorgeous the interiors are and how BIG the space is. With lots of gold everywhere (naturally... but done tastefully) there's also a good balance of light and greenery, especially on the ground floor, where you'll walk through palm trees to get to your table.

Gold serves small, seasonal plates cooked in wood ovens, which are meant to be shared. It's a good thing because you'll definitely want to try as much of the menu as you can. While the vibe here is fairly laid back, in the evenings the clientele tends to be dressed rather trendy, so you might feel most comfortable following suit.

GRANGER & CO

Australian restaurateur Bill Granger initially found success in Sydney, Tokyo and Seoul, so he then set his sights on London, and because of that we have been blessed with Granger & Co.

Think: bright and light interiors and an all-day menu, inspired by the colourful, sunny vibes of Australia, which we obviously do not get to experience quite as often here in London. Granger & Co is most famous for its breakfast menu, which features many twists on the traditional breakfast offerings I usually see.

No bookings here - walk-in only, so arrive early or late if you want to visit on the weekends.

LOS MOCHIS

If you're after something a little upmarket but totally worth it, Los Mochis in Notting Hill is a must-visit. The menu is incredible, blending Mexican and Japanese flavours with fresh sashimi, maki rolls, ceviches and fun taco options — plus everything is gluten-free! Loads of people also rave about their spicy salmon on crispy rice, so it's a must-order if you like a little bit of spice.

It's also home to the exclusive JUNO Omakase downstairs. Seating only six people at a time, guests will enjoy a menu curated by Executive Chef Leonard Tanyag and indulge in 15 creative courses crafted one by one in front of you by expert sushi chefs. Book in advance if this experience intrigues you as it tends to sell out fast!

FFIONA'S

Ffiona's restaurant, which feels more like a cute little indie cafe with its blue and white wallpaper and chalkboard menu, has been a staple of Kensington for over 25 years. Stop in for brunch, lunch, dinner or a Sunday roast, with a British-inspired menu. They're famous for their fluffy buttermilk pancakes (which are gluten-free) and French toast. They're also super diet-restriction friendly!

Book ahead if you can, especially on the weekends, as the restaurant is quite cosy and doesn't have many tables.

DISHOOM

Dishoom is an all-day Indian restaurant that hit the scene in 2015 and since then has become a favourite of Londoners, both Indian and not. The decor at this Kensington location veers away from the usual homely feel to an art-deco 1940s Bombay club vibe. The food is inspired by Bombay as well, and none of it disappoints, despite being reasonably priced. This even goes for the breakfast!

The menu is pretty large here, so definitely ask your server for recommendations. The staff are SO helpful and kind, and they'll be happy to point you in the right direction, like towards the famous house black daal. Expect to over-order and take home leftovers; it'll be worth it. Plus, for every meal you buy, they donate a meal to a child who would otherwise go hungry. They've donated over ten million meals so far.

BALANS

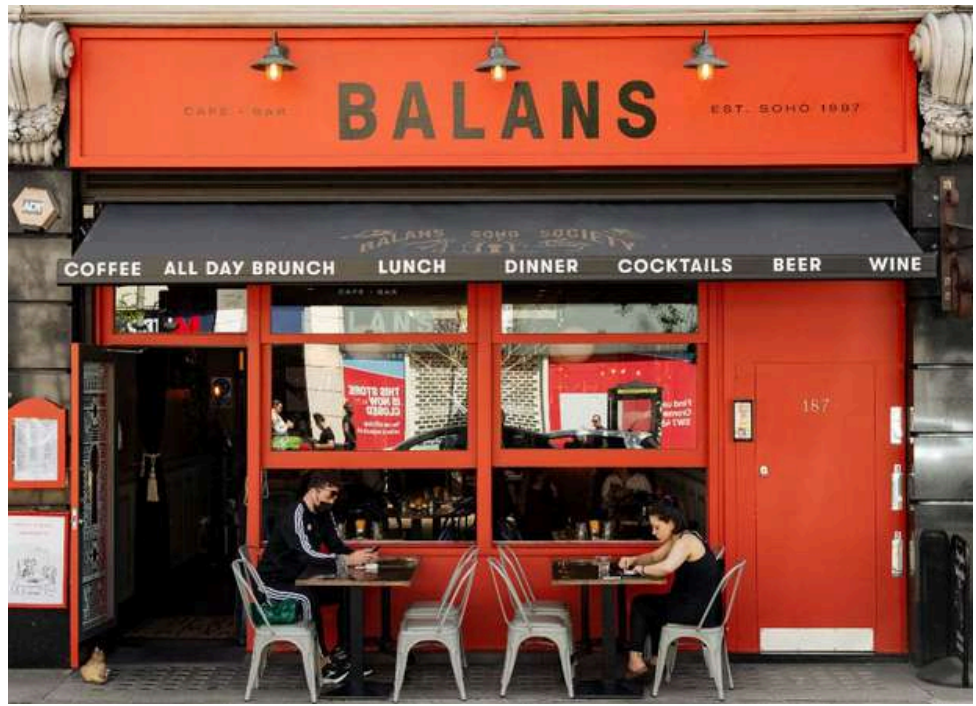

Balans is an all-around great spot for breakfast in an area that doesn't have many great options that aren't also overpriced. Pop in for breakfast to kick off your day of sightseeing, and you'll get to choose from some top-notch brunch classics like French toast and eggs royale, with the breakfast burrito being a fave. They serve brunch all day, so no worries if you arrive here for a late start or want to do a bit of exploring before sitting down for some grub.

LINA STORES

Lina Stores has a few locations around the city, and it's quickly become a favourite of Londoners for a somewhat affordable, very tasty and a bit innovative Italian menu that works for almost everyone, even vegans and gluten-free people. Plus the blue-green branding is adorable. My must-orders include the Gnudi Fritti (fried ricotta & herb gnudi and Calabrian chilli marmellata) and rosemary foccacia to start, then I change it up for my main. If I don't have the Lina Store Negroni, there was actually no point in me even dining there that day.

DARCIE & MAY GREEN

How does lunch on a colourful, flower-lined canal boat sound? That's what you get with Australian-inspired Darcie & May Green, based on a boat in the Paddington Basin, designed exclusively by the 'godfather' of British pop art; Sir Peter Blake.

Clearly, this is a fun venue, especially in the sunny summer months, but the food is top-notch too. I'm talking Aussie-style brunch dishes that are Instagram-worthy, tasty smoothies, eclectic cocktails, and of course, good Australian-style coffee.

Book ahead in the summer months, but they're open for breakfast, brunch, lunch and dinner.

TRAILER HAPPINESS

On Portobello Road is a little basement cocktail bar called Trailer Happiness. Head downstairs and you'll be ready to order exotic, tiki-style cocktails (or go for anything you'd like, really)! Rum fans, this is your spot, as here you'll find a vast selection of rums you can drink straight if your little heart desires. And on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights Trailer Happiness is straight vibes, with a live DJ playing the perfect mix of reggae, blues and funk.

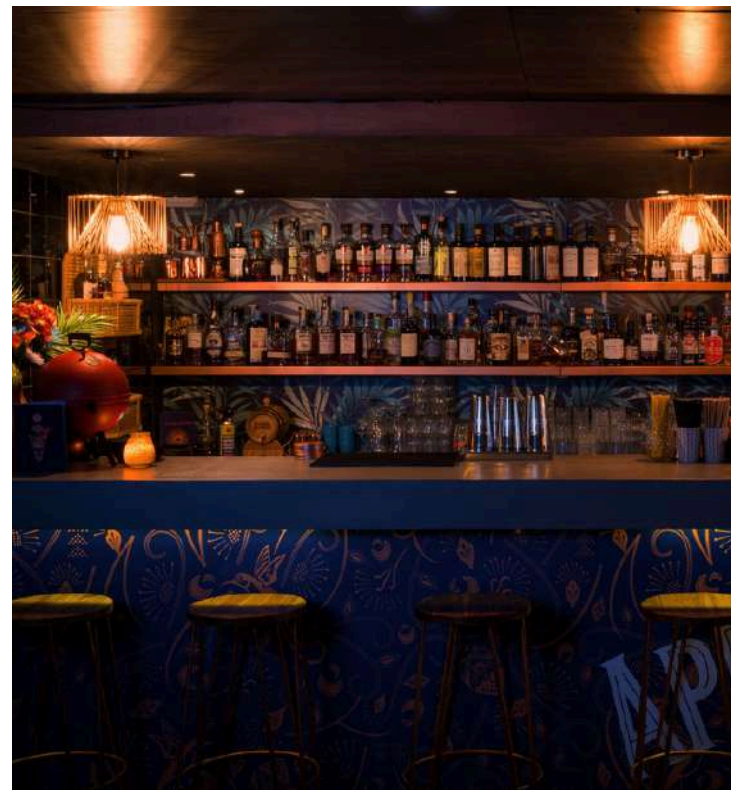

This place is popular on the weekends, so book a table if you can!

THE HENDERSON AT THE LASLETT

The Laslett is a luxury hotel right in Notting Hill named after Rhaune Laslett, a local activist who was a co-organiser of the original Notting Hill Carnival, parade and street festival that happens every August, celebrating the area's Caribbean and African roots. But even if you're not staying in this stunning, minimalist hotel, you can head through the lobby to the Henderson, the hotel's cocktail bar named after Russell 'Russ' Henderson, a well-loved Trinidadian musician, and another one of the co-founders of the Notting Hill Carnival. Cocktails here are unique and divine, and they often have an offering off-menu that your server will be happy to recommend amongst other gorgeous options, depending on your tastes.

The bar itself is intimate, with just a few tables and green velvet seating lining the light pink walls. But if you find yourself with a beautiful sunny day, choose a spot on the terrace to sip your cocktail of choice.

THE LITTLE YELLOW DOOR

The Little Yellow Door can only be found by, you guessed it, its yellow front door. Head inside and you'll be in an intimate bar that's designed to feel like you're in someone's colourful and quirky home. On the ground floor is the restaurant and bar where you can have drinks, do bottomless brunch or have a bite to eat. Head downstairs and you'll be in "The Flatmates Den" with late night vibes, including a DJ booth, fancy dress box (fancy dress means "costume dress" in the UK) and even games tables.

If you want to feel like you've been to a posh Notting Hill house party, then definitely add The Little Yellow Door to your must-visit list.

THE PELICAN

The Pelican is a modern, classy pub done right – think welcoming space with a trendy, lively atmosphere that still feels true to its roots. It's the kind of spot you'd love to have at the end of your street, and Notting Hill locals clearly agree because this place is packed most nights with people sipping beers and cocktails and sitting down to dine. The menu is full of delicious, no-fuss dishes with a focus on top-quality meat and fish, like whole roasted turbot or a tomahawk steak.

THE LADBROKE ARMS

I love the selection of hyper-local pubs around Notting Hill and Holland Park, and the Ladbrooke Arms is one of my favourites. Londoners will pop in here after work for a quick pint, meet up with friends on a Saturday, or bring the family for a Sunday roast on, well, Sunday. The staff are super chill and friendly, the food is AMAZING, and you can always count on a relaxed vibe no matter what time of day it is. If the weather is nice, be sure to grab a spot on the front terrace in the sunshine.

THE WINDSOR CASTLE

The Windsor Castle is one of the oldest pubs in west London, dating all the way back to the 1820s. Its interiors have been beautifully preserved, from the wood panelling to very small doorways that you might have to duck to get through. Because this pub is tucked away on a quiet back street, it's heavily frequented by locals that live nearby and it's also super family-friendly during the day. The Windsor Castle is also a popular spot for a gorgeous Sunday roast.

If you find yourself visiting on a sunny day, pop out to the inviting courtyard beer garden!

CHURCHILL ARMS

Dating back to 1750, the Churchill Arms is one of the oldest and most historic pubs in all of London, but that's not the only reason it's special. First off, the name comes from the fact that Winston Churchill's grandparents were regular patrons, and to take advantage of this fun fact, the pub was renamed after WWII (you'll see lots of Churchill memorabilia on the walls). The pub is also home to, somewhat strangely, one of the best Thai restaurants in the area. So you won't find pub grub here, but you'll still eat very well. Finally, the Churchill Arms is well known around the world for its stunning exterior, which is covered either in blooming flowers, or Christmas trees when it gets to the festive season. I've actually include it in our London Colouring Book, it's so iconic! Either way, a pint in this cosy, historic pub is one you'll not forget.

BAR 190

The Gore hotel in South Kensington has been hosting London guests for over 100 years, apart from a four-year stretch when it was the Turkish Embassy. It's now a top choice hotel for international music stars, actors, politicians and other "big wigs". Bar 190 is the hotel's iconic cocktail bar, and right when you step inside you can tell it's seen a thing or two. There's lots of history here, as the Rolling Stones album Beggars Banquet was launched in this very bar back in 1968, with photos from that historic night now adorning the walls for you to enjoy.

On top of that, the original wood panelling and dark furnishings feel quite masculine and old-school luxurious, and the whiskey and bourbon-heavy cocktail menu matches that vibe, so if that's your thing, you're in for a treat. The cocktails are inspired by the events that have transpired here and people who have sat in the same seat as you have... pretty cool.
